

The Transferware Recorder

Number Four – Selected Patterns from Literature

Reynardine Publishing is pleased to announce the release of a fourth volume in The Transferware Recorder series. The first three were published in October 2013, June 2015 and October 2016 and have received many positive reviews: “Totally absorbing” “Brilliant”

“A key series of works on British printed ceramics” “What fantastic books they are”
“Absolutely superb in both concept and execution” “So much reliable information”

One reviewer noted that “further editions will be keenly awaited” and now we have another volume to whet the appetite.

This new book covers subjects from literature and features seventeen series of patterns, specific chapters on Cowper and Shakespeare, and a selection of individual patterns. Some are well known, others virtually unrecorded; some made for domestic consumption, others for the American market. All known scenes are listed, some titled, many identified, nearly all illustrated in colour. Many of the source prints from which the scenes were copied are also identified and illustrated. A full list of items is provided, along with references to illustrations elsewhere. At 208 pages, this is the largest volume so far.

Aesop’s Fables (Mintons)
“The Ages of Man” (Dillwyn)
“Byron Gallery” (two series)
“Classical Antiquities” (Clementson)
Cowper (Meir)
Don Quixote (Maker Unknown)
“The Drama” (Rogers / Pountney)
“Humphrey’s Clock” (Ridgway)
“Paul and Virginia” (Smith)
“Pickwick” (Godwin)
“Robin Hood” (Bailey & Ball)
Robinson Crusoe (Brownhills)
